THE MOST DANGEROUS DISEASE

No organs of the human body are so important to health and long life as the kidneys. When they slow up and commence to lag in their duties, look out! Find out what the trouble is—without delay. Whenever you feel nervous, weak, dizzy, suffer from sleeplessness, or have pains in the back—wake up at once. Your kidneys need help. These are signs to warn you that your kidneys are not performing their functions properly. They are only half doing their work and are allowing impurities to accumulate and be converted into uric acid and other poisons which are causing you distress and will destroy you unless they are driven from your system.

ONE OF THE WORLD'S MOST GORGEOUS BUILDINGS.

The Palace of Versailles Where the Peace Treaty Was Signed.—
Something of Its Past.

Knowing that anything connected with the Palace of Versailles would be at the present moment, especially as the peace treaty between the Allies and Huns was signed there only last week, a matter of far more than ordinary interest to our readers, especially if they could see it through the eyes of one of our citizens, the Sentinel's reporter called upon probably the only man in our county who has seen this historical edifice and been through its great halls and the magnificent park surrounding it, Mr. Edwin A. Welty, of our city, who in answer to our inquiries, gave us a brief interview, touching on the palace, the great park surrounding it and a few of the great historical incidents connected with its past. Beginning Mr. Welty said the Palace of Versailles is some twelve miles southwest of the centre of Paris. The Palace itself was built by the famous Louis the XIV, le Grande Monarque, as the French people call him and truly a monarch every inch of him. The sight of the Palace was the hunting lodge of a former king and the grounds surrounding it are the highest type of the landscape art known to the world and the building itself marks the high tide of French architecture, within these grounds are the famous fountains known the world over, and also in this park are the Grand Trianon and Petit Trianon Palaces, the latter being the residence of Marie Antoinette, whose excesses and th orgies of whose court finally led to the French Revolution, the reign of terror and the execution of the King and Marie Antoinette herself. The marble court of this palace and its interior, about 110 feet long and possibly 80 feet wide, is in gorgeousness, grandeur and magnificence probably unequalled in the Western world. Its rooms furnished with the sumptuousness of the Orient, and the walls of its halls a glitter of mirrors, and between them the great paintings in which are depicted the glories and the past of La Belle France, the crowning of Charlemagne, the romance of Francis and the Cloth of Gold, the days of the Crusaders with the French Knights in quest of the Holy Grail and the days of Louis XIV, when France reached the pinnacle of its power and glory, then the days of the Revolution, the days of Mirabeau and Danton, then the rise of the Corsican, Napoleon, and his marshals—McDonald, Soult, Kleber, Prince Murat and Chambranne, and the men of the empire; of Austerlitz, Marengo and Waterloo. In this hall is the only picture extant of Ney, the bravest of the brave, the John A. Logan of France. It was taken of him at 22, then a son Lieutenant. To those of the Sentinel's readers as have drawn in fancy a picture of this great hero of France as the par excellence of manly beauty, grace and chivalry, the picture itself comes as a disappointment. The face is coarse, the eyes dull and the whole features heavy. There is none of the sparkle and vivacity we ascribe to the French type, it is rather and for all the world like a Dutch butcher boy. The study of these great pictures in which is depicted the history of France would take days, and the furnishings of every room is a work of art, such as does credit to even Paris, the city beautiful of the world and known as such the world over. It was from a balcony of this Palace that Lafayette attempted to appease the mob by introducing Marie Antoinette thinking that a sight of the beautiful queen and the witchery of her grace might quell the rising storm, but the sight of the beautiful Austrian seemed rather to fan it to increased fury. In this hall was terminated the struggle ending in our independence the final peace treaty between England and America being signed here. Here also was enacted the shame and humiliation of France, for it was in this hall on January 18, 1871, that Frederick William, the king of Prussia, was crowned Emperor of Germany. Around the dias where this historical pageant was enacted was grouped the great statesmen of Germany and its great generals, Bismarck, the man of iron; Von Moltke, Manteuffel and the officers of the German Imperial Staff, a glitter of gold lace and a sheen of steel; Unser Fritz and the lesser rulers of the German states, and men whose fame resounded through the courts of Europe all were here. It was fitting indeed that this great Palace which had witnessed the overthrow of France should also in its turn in this great historical hall witness the overthrow of the beast of Berlin, the dismemberment of his great empire, the return to France of its ravished provinces and the triumph of democracy, and again see the truth enacted in the words of holy writ that "he who takes up the sword shall perish by the sword," for indeed it is not true of our time what has been true of all time that

"No house can stand, no kingdom can endure
Built on the crumbling rock of self desire;
Nothing is living stone, nothing is sure,
That is not tempered in God's whitening fire."
"I have given you," said Mr. Welty in closing, "but a mere glimpse of the great Palace of Versailles, which last week witnessed the signing of the Peace treaty between Germany and the Allies. To see Versailles rightly is to see the history of France."
